Dear Stakeholder,

At Reyes Coca-Cola Bottling (RCCB) we are committed to making a positive impact in the communities where we live and work. As part of our commitment, we believe in the power and necessity of working together to lift those around us and leave a better world for future generations. We concentrate on specific areas where we believe we can make the biggest difference, including the efficient use of water. Protecting this resource is a priority at all our locations and especially in California. We recognize the need to not only minimize our water use but also to engage with stakeholders to ensure the availability of clean water for everyone and the environment.

As part of our ongoing commitment to responsible water management and sustainability, we are pleased to inform you that we are in the process of pursuing a water stewardship certification under the Alliance for Water Stewardship (AWS) standard. Through this process, we would like to invite you to an upcoming stakeholder engagement meeting to engage with us in this initiative. As an important stakeholder and partner, your participation and input are crucial. This will be an opportunity to come together, share ideas and identify synergies in water stewardship.

AWS is a non-profit, multi stakeholder organization that includes NGOs and both public and private-sector companies. AWS certification is the only globally recognized water stewardship standard and aims to achieve five outcomes: good water governance, sustainable water balance, good water quality, attention to important water-related areas affecting water supplies, and safe water, sanitation, and hygiene (WaSH) for all.

Conserving, restoring and replenishing our local water supplies is a top priority. As a local bottler, we proudly support the Coca-Cola Company's comprehensive approach to achieving water security for its business. We strive to reduce water usage, improve water treatment processes, evaluate our water usage impact, and replenish the water sources in our communities. We look forward to your participation and valuable contributions as we work together to achieve these goals

Sincerely,

Rob Zimmerman
